FIRE INSURANCE NOTICES, &c. COMPANY, ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA.

AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING.
The Charter of this Company offers more favorable advantages to the farmer and others, than any Company chartered in the State, by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium in cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two nember, and giving a small premium note, the in sured saves nearly one half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the combination of the

CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE. This Company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 13th day of March, 1854, since which time over seven thousand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over seventy thousand dollars have been paid for losses. Having increased our business during the past year, we feel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering pros-pects of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe, that, by prudence, caution, and a rigid system of economy, they will establish for this Company a reputation for cheapness and safety not surpassed by any Company in the U. States, All differences in settlement of losses, may be County where such loss happened, to be mutually chosen by the insured and the Company. DIRECTORS: James T. Close, Edward Sangster. Dr. R. H. Stabler. Thomas T. Hill, W. D. Massey, R. H. Carter, P. D. Lipscomb. Wm. Wright, R. F. Lester, W. M. Turner. S. T. Stuart.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

Salut Public, of Lyons, says:

"It was yesterday at a cafe with the officers of the 30th at the gate of the Albergo, when a loud cry of 'Vice I Empereur!' arose. It was the Emperor, who had arrived unexpectedly on horseback, in a general's uniform, with a kepi, and escorted by only a few ofyears, the insured saves one-eighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay; or by becoming a tion was on foot, the streets were decked with flags, and drums were beat to collect the troops. His Majesty proceeded slowly by the street which leads to an eminence from which the naked eye can see the vast plains of the Po and the Lomellina. The position being within reach of cannon was not without danger. I had the honor of approaching the Emperor, who, bending down on his horse's neck, asked me if I were French. 1 replied that I was a journalist who had ventured to the advanced posts. He smiled and questioned me on the positions of the Austrians. I showed him detachments of their troops on the banks of the river, the village Frescarolo, and in the horizon Mortara, their head-quarters.

His Majesty, by means of his glass, could see an Austrian soldier on watch in the belfy determined by three disinterested arbitrators of the off the church of Frescarolo, and even distinguish the hour by the clock. On the left is blown up two arches, and which he guards with 200 or 300 men. The shakoes of the sentinels on the banks of the river could be distinguished here and there. The Emperor then coversed with some of the Italians. His Majesty speaks pure Tuscan, and with a facility which surprised his hearers. After an inspection, which lasted about twenty minutes, the Emperor turned to leave. As he did so, the troops who were drawn up in line waved their shakoes on their bayonets and cried out a thousand times, "Vice l' Empercur!" An old Italian patriot, who had been in exile since 1849, approached and cried out, with tears streaming down his face, "Vive Napoleon, il Salvatore della Italia!"-The Emperor seemed affected, and saluted him kindly. At that moment the Emperor's eye met mine, and in the emotion of the moment, I ventured to hold out my hand. His Majesty deigned with a smile to grasp it. This is an incident which I shall never forget as long as I live. The Emperor then left by the gate of Alessandria.'

THE TURK AND THE RUSSIAN. One of the most amusing of our acquaintances was the gentleman with whom I had the honor of sleeping on the billiard-table .-He was a long, sallow Pole, observant and satirical, and full of ludierous stories of his Turkish co-religionists. How far these tales were literally true-whether he ever allowed one to fall flat through a servile adherence to matter-of-fact--I do not undertake to say; but, true or false, his stories were given with a knowledge and mimicry of Turkish manners that made them delightful to hear .-At the risk of its falling flat second hand, I cannot resist telling one. A Turkish and a Russian officer, on some occasion of truce, had scratched up an acquaintance. As they sat together, the conversation turned on the comparative perfection of discipline and obedience to which their respective troops had been brought. To give a specimen, the ful Lawns, new styles, 12½c. and 18¾c., very low, "Ivan," says and with many other goods, which they are desirous of closing out, and will be sold at prices to suit the times. Call at No. 64. Russian calls in his orderly. "Ivan," says he, "you will go to such-and-such a tobacconist; you will buy an oak of tobacco; pay for it, and bring it home straight." Ivan bacconist; now he is there; now he is paying for the tobacco; now he is coming home; now he is on the stairs; now he is here-Ivan!" Ivan comes in, salutes, and hands over the tobacco. "Pek guzel," says the fat Turk, with a condescending bow, benignly half-shutting his eyes the while; "very nice, indeed; but my orderly will do as much— Mustafa." "Effendim!" says Mustafa, burst-ing into the room and touching his chin and His master hauls out a gigantic turnip of a watch such as Turks delight in; and proceeds, in imitation of the Russian, to tick off Mustafa's supposed performances. "Now he is going; now he is there; now he is paying: now he is coming home; now he is here -Mustafa!" "Effendim," replies Mustafa, again bursting in. "Where's the tobacco?" RESEMBLANCES.

A letter from Valenz, of the 18th, in the be discovered between the summits and the abysses of the social system-nay, between man and the very lowest tribes of the brute creation! For instance, I am on intimate terms with a half-bred poodle-a quadruped of sluggish intellect and impenetrable affect tion-who is wonderful by like the portraits of Shakspeare, and who has been named after the immortal bard for that reason. We have our vegetables and fire-wood from a living likeness of Julius Cæsar, who can scarcely calculate the change of a shilling accurately; and whose wife beats him cruelly. Liston, the celebrated actor, whose ugliness was half his fortune, was at the same time renowned for his resemblance to the undeniably handsome King George the Fourth. An illustri-ous neighbor and ally of ours—for the rest, a much better-looking man than his carica-turists would lead you to believe—ean by no device of imperial splendor, martial pomp, or faultless Parisian tailoring, diviet himself of the outward aspect of a London betting housekeeper. I remember seeing a pretty, effeminate little dandy at a picture exhibition, whom I heard make some sensible remarks on the paintings. He turned out to be an eminent prize-fighter. A few days ago I was shown a brawny, ill-dressed, illtempered-looking man, who might have been the railway bridge, of which the enemy has a dog-stealer, but who proved to be one of the most refined and accomplished poets of the day .- National Magazine.

A LUXURIOUS COUCH.-Beggars swarm in China, and their king lives at Pekin. They die by the roadside, and are forgotten. At Pekin there is a large house called "The House of the Hen's Feathers;" here the floor of an immense hall is strewn three feet deep with feathers; and into this wallowing sea of down, at a certain hour, all houseless vagabonds who apply for shelter are turned .-At a beat of the tam-tam an immense tarpauling counterpane comes down unfurling from the ceiling, and spreads over them all like the wings of a fabulous roc hatching a nest full of eggs. The next morning, at a similar beat, it is again drawn up, and the vagabonds disperse to show their sores and collect their alms .- Eclectic Magazine.
